1           I. INTRODUCTION

2           Plaintiff's motion for remand should be granted. First, it is undisputed that TBIG's
 3 corporate charter was revoked when TBIG purported to join in the notice of removal of this action
 4 on August 27, 2007 and that, under Nevada law, TBIG was forbidden from transacting any business 5 on that date. Defendants have not cited any authority that holds that a revoked corporation whose 6 ability to transact business has been forfeited can nonetheless validly join in a removal of a case
 7 from state court to federal court. The majority rule is that an administratively dissolved corporation
 8 may not participate in litigation and that its court filings are a nullity. Second, defendants have not 9 met their burden of demonstrating that diversity jurisdiction exists. Defendants' declaration from 10 Mr. Baratta is wholly conclusory and provides no facts on the place of TBIG's operations, which is 11 the relevant inquiry under governing Ninth Circuit law. The declarations from Mr. Meister and Mr.
 12 Waldman, proffered to establish the citizenship of Wachovia's corporate parents, are also 13 conclusory and are not even from persons with personal knowledge of such facts. Accordingly, the 14 Court should grant plaintiff's motion to remand.

15           II. REPLY ARGUMENT

16           A. TBIG COULD NOT HAVE VALIDLY JOINED IN THE REMOVAL 17 ON AUGUST 27 AND ITS SUBSEQUENT REINSTATEMENT IS 18 IRRELEVANT

19           As described in plaintiff's opening brief, defendant Wachovia Securities LLC was served 20 with the Complaint on July 26, and filed its notice of removal on August 27. While Wachovia 21 Securities' removal was within the thirty day period required by 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b),<sup>1</sup> TBIG, who 22 had been served on August 3, did not properly join in the removal within that time period. TBIG
 23 did not properly join in the removal on August 27 because it is undisputed that TBIG was a revoked
 24 corporation on August 27, and that under Nevada law, TBIG's "right to transact business" had long 25 been "forfeited." Nev. Rev. Stat. § 78.175(2).

26           Faced with these facts, defendants make two principal arguments in opposition to the

---

27           <sup>1</sup> Thirty days after July 26 was Sunday, August 26; defendants therefore had until Monday, August 28 to file the notice of removal. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a) (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays "when the act to be done is the filing of a paper in court").

1 remand motion to contend that the Court should ignore TBIG's status as a revoked corporation on 2 August 27. First, defendants argue that TBIG's revoked status is irrelevant because such 3 corporations can sue or be sued (Opp. MPA at 10-11). Second, citing Nevada Revised Statute
 4 Section 78.180(5), defendants argue that TBIG's reinstatement after the joinder, on August 31, 5 should be given retroactive effect under Nevada law and validate its joinder on August 27 (Opp.
 6 MPA 11-12). Neither argument is persuasive.

7 As plaintiff discusses in her opposition to defendants' joint motion to amend the removal 8 notice, defendants' first argument confuses the issue of whether a revoked corporation can be sued 9 with whether a revoked corporation can defend itself or otherwise participate in the lawsuit.
 10 Defendants' cited authorities — Wild v. Subscription Plus, Inc., 292 F.3d 526 (7th Cir. 2002) and 11 Clipper Air Cargo Inc. v. Aviation Products International, Inc., 981 F.Supp. 956 (D.S.C. 1997)—
 12 hold only that a revoked corporation can be sued. See, e.g. Wild, 292 F.3d at 529 (under Oklahoma
 13 law, a revoked corporation can be sued); Clipper Air Cargo, 981 F.Supp. at 959-60 (under Nevada 14 law, a revoked corporation can be sued). Neither case addresses whether revoked corporation can 15 file a joinder, or otherwise actively participate in litigation, while the corporation's charter remains 16 revoked, or whether the corporation must first reinstate its charter before it can properly engage in 17 such activities.

18 The majority rule is that an administratively dissolved corporation such as TBIG, during the 19 period of its dissolution, "cannot bring, defend, or appeal lawsuits in its corporate name, except for 20 the purpose of winding up or liquidating its business or affairs." 16A William M. Fletcher, 21 Fletcher Cyclopedic of the Law of Private Corporations, § 7997 at 38-43 (Perm. Ed. 2003)
 22 ("Fletcher Cyclopedia"). Any actions that the dissolved corporation purportedly takes in litigation 23 during the period of its disability are a "nullity." See United States ex rel. Gordon Sel-Way, Inc. v.
 24 Washtenaw County, 1996 Dist. LEXIS 15537, at * 4-5, 6-7 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 22, 1996).
 25 Defendants have not cited any authorities that indicate that Nevada departs from this majority rule.

26 Defendants' argument regarding the effect of TBIG's reinstatement of its charter on August 27 31 rests on a misunderstanding of Nevada law. As discussed in plaintiff's opposition to defendants'
 28 motion to amend the removal notice, Section 78.180(5) of the Nevada Revised Statutes, the statute

1 that defendants claim provides retroactive effect to TBIG's reinstatement of its corporate charter,
 2 did not become the law in Nevada until October 1, 2007. See Page 2 of Exhibit A to the Declaration
 3 of Christopher Cooke in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Amend Removal Notice (legislative 4 history of S.B. 483, stating statute is effective "October 1, 2007"). The effective date of Section 5 78.180(5) is more than one month after the time for removal had expired and is even after plaintiff 6 filed her motion for remand. This statute has no bearing on this case, and it is too late for TBIG to 7 join in the removal notice now.

8       When TBIG reinstated its corporate charter on August 31, Nevada law was silent on 9 whether such a reinstatement should be given prospective or retroactive effect. A leading treatise 10 states that "[r]einstate will be applied prospectively when the corporation law is silent on the 11 matter." 16A Fletcher Cyclopedia § 8112.30 at 214. This treatise accurately describes Nevada law 12 on this issue. The Nevada legislature would not have needed to enact Section 78.180(5) if Nevada 13 law had already provided that a revoked corporation's reinstatement of its charter applied 14 retroactively to validate all actions taken during the period of the corporation's disability, rather 15 than prospectively. Cf. Abrego v. Dow Chemical Co., 443 F.3d 676, 683-84 (9th Cir. 2006) ("In 16 this instance, the statute is not ambiguous. Instead, it is entirely silent . . . Faced with statutory 17 silence on the burden issue, we presume that Congress is aware of the legal context in which it is 18 legislating").

19       Defendants also assert, in passing, that if TBIG were incapable of participating in the 20 litigation, "including TBIG in this suit would be meaningless" and that "removal to this court 21 would be appropriate." (Opp. MPA at 11:59). This assertion is without merit.

22       As already discussed, TBIG's inability to defend itself in the litigation does not mean that it
 23 cannot be sued. The only way in which the Court could properly disregard TBIG, and thus excuse 24 its failure to properly join in the notice of removal, would be if defendants could establish that 25 TBIG were a "sham" or "nominal" defendant who was fraudulently joined in this action and whose 26 presence the Court may disregard for purposes of determining diversity jurisdiction. See, e.g.
 27 United Computer Systems, Inc. v. AT&T Corp., 298 F.3d 756, 761-2 (9th Cir. 2002), Nickerman v.
 28 Remco Hydraulics, Inc., 2006 WL 2329516 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2006).

1           To invoke the “sham” or nominal” defendant doctrine, defendants would have to 2 demonstrate either that plaintiff had no possible claim against TBIG under state law (United 3 Computer System, 298 F.3d at 762) or that TBIG had no assets, operations, and essentially ceased
 4 to exist as a business. Nickerman, 2006 WL 2329516 at **2-4. Of course, defendants have not 5 made and cannot make any such showing. TBIG’s own Form ADV, filed with the Securities and 6 Exchange Commission on March 27, 2007, indicates that TBIG has $46.7 million in assets under 7 management, in 51 discretionary and 6 non-discretionary accounts. (See Declaration of Christopher 8 Cooke In Support of Motion to Remand, filed Sept. 26, 2007, at Ex. A, page 7).<sup>2</sup>

9           B. DEFENDANTS HAVE FAILED TO MEET THEIR BURDEN OF 10           DEMONSTRATING DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP EXISTS

11           The Court should remand this action because defendants have also failed to meet their 12 burden of demonstrating that diversity of citizenship exists. Defendants’ declarations from Joseph 13 Baratta, Kenneth Meister, and Paul Waldman come woefully short of meeting defendants’ burden 14 of establishing that diversity jurisdiction exists in this case.<sup>3</sup>

15           Joseph Baratta’s declaration is insufficient to establish that TBIG’s principal place of 16 business lies in Nevada and not California because he provides no facts regarding TBIG’s business 17 activities that would allow the Court to make this determination. In the Ninth Circuit, a 18 corporation’s principal place of business is usually determined by reference to one of two tests, the 19 “nerve center” test or the “place of operations” test. See Tosco Corp. v. Communities for a Better
Environment, 236 F.3d 495, 500 (9th Cir. 2002). For an inactive corporation, some courts also look 20 at the place in which the corporation last engaged in business activities before it became inactive,
 21 and the period of time it has remained inactive. See Sports Shinko Co. Ltd. v. QK Hotel LLC, 486

 23           <sup>2</sup> Defendant Baratta claims that the Form ADV attached to the Cooke Declaration is from 2005. He 24 is mistaken. The signature line on the Form ADV indicates that this is the Form ADV that was 25 filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission on March 27, 2007. (Cooke Dec. Ex. A at page 26 22). That Baratta’s version of the Form ADV now discloses a Nevada address for TBIG is not 27 surprising, since Baratta himself can change the information appearing in the Form ADV.

28           <sup>3</sup> Plaintiff assumes that the Court can properly consider these declarations even though they present 29 facts beyond those alleged in the Removal Notice and the complaint. The Ninth Circuit has held 30 that the court can consider “summary-judgment-type” of evidence, such as declarations from 31 percipient witnesses, to determine whether the “amount in controversy” requirement has been 32 satisfied. See Abrego, 443 F.3d at 690.

1 F.Supp.2d 1168 (D. Hawaii 2007) (noting split among 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th Circuits, and following
 2 other district courts in the Ninth Circuit in adopting the “case by case” approach of the 4th and 5th 3 Circuit, which examines whether corporation has been inactive for a substantial period of time and 4 the location of its activities and assets when it was last active).

5 While Mr. Baratta clarifies that TBIG’s offices are now located at his residence in Incline 6 Village, Nevada, he does not provide any facts regarding where it has conducted its activities, when 7 it has conducted them, and where its customers are located and serviced. Mr. Baratta also does not 8 deny Mrs. Ettare’s assertion that he met and solicited her as a customer when she was in California 9 in 2002. These omissions regarding the location of TBIG’s business activities are telling: “Where a 10 majority of a corporation’s business activity takes place in one state, that state is the corporation’s 11 principal place of business, even if the corporate headquarters are located in a different state. The 12 “nerve center” test should be used only when no state contains a substantial predominance of the 13 corporation’s business activities.” Tosco Corp., 236 F.3d at 500 (italics in original). The Court
 14 should infer, from defendants absence of evidence on this issue, that a majority of TBIG’s business 15 activities have taken place in California, its former corporate home, and not Nevada.

16 The declarations from Messrs. Meister and Waldman, proffered to establish that diversity of 17 jurisdiction exists with respect to Wachovia Securities LLC, are similarly deficient. These 18 declarations do not establish that Wachovia Securities’s ultimate corporate parents —Everen 19 Capital Corporation and Prudential Securities Group, Inc. —are citizens of states other than 20 California, because Mr. Meister and Mr. Waldman are not officers of those two corporations. Mr.
 21 Meister states that he is an officer of “Prudential Equity Group, LLC.” (See Declaration of Kenneth 22 Meister In Support of Defendants’ Joint Opposition to Plaintiff’s Motion to Remand, ¶ 1 at 1, filed 23 on Oct. 29, 2007 (“Meister Dec.”)) His employer is not a party in this case and is not one of the 24 apparent owners of defendant Wachovia Securities LLC. (Meister Dec. ¶¶2-3).

25 Similarly, Mr. Waldman states that he is an officer of Wachovia Securities LLC, but he is 26 not, apparently, an officer of Everen Capital Corporation or Prudential Securities Group, Inc., the
 28

1 only two relevant entities for purposes of determining the citizenship of Wachovia Securities LLC.<sup>4</sup>
 2 (Declaration of Paul Waldman In Support of Defendants' Joint Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to 3 Remand, ¶ 1 at 1, filed Oct. 29, 2007).

4 Mr. Meister and Mr. Waldman do not provide any facts to explain how they know the 5 locations of the principal places of business of two corporations that are not their employers. As 6 such, these declarations are inadmissible. See Fed. R. Evid. 602 ("A witness may not testify to a 7 matter unless evidence is introduced sufficient to support a finding that the witness has personal 8 knowledge of the matter"). In addition, each declaration is wholly conclusory and does not provide 9 any facts from which the Court may determine the principal place of business of either corporation
 10 under the place of operations or the nerve center tests followed in the Ninth Circuit.

11 III. CONCLUSION

12 For the reasons set forth, this Court should grant Plaintiff's Motion to Remand.

25 <sup>4</sup> These two declarations and defendants' proposed amended removal notice are replete with facts 26 regarding the laws under which various limited liability companies are organized and where these 27 entities are located. This information is irrelevant. Under *Johnson v. Columbia Properties
 Anchorage, L.P.*, 437 F.3d 894 (9th Cir. 2006), the Court is required to treat a limited liability 28 company like a partnership, and look to the citizenship of the owners of the limited liability company. Here, the relevant non-LLC owners are apparently the two corporations Prudential Securities Group, Inc. and Everen Capital Corp.
